CONGRESS DID NOT END DEPRESSION.

When the financial depression was at its inception last fall there was a call from Wall street for a special session of congress so that some law might be passed which would restore the country to the business prosperity which had been enjoyed for the past decade. The regular session of congress being close at hand, President Roosevelt caused the secretary of the treasury to shovel out $25,000,000 to stay a worse collapse than had already occurred until congress could provide for an emergency currency which would be a bar forever against any financial slump or stringency. Congress has now been in session for five months and no law has been passed as a panacea for panic ill. Nor will one be passed which will give relief to those who are responsible for the financial panic of last year and those who have been responsible for all former financial panics.

As stated in this paper last December, congress cannot and will not provide for the payment of the debts of the country, corporate or individual, and we must all agree that inability to pay the accumulated debts of the country is what brings on panics. Panics are not harmful to the frugal man who has avoided speculation and the contracting of debts which he could not pay; in fact, the frugal man who has avoided financial obligations and approaches a financial panic with a cash surplus often finds the golden opportunity for profitable investment, while the speculator, who has been plunging for abnormal profits on the stock board, soon finds that he is closed out as a bankrupt. After that there is nothing which congress can do to restore that which he has lost in his chase for quick gain.

Two economic delusions long possessed the public mind, but both have been dispelled by the October panic of 1907. One was the fancy that a financial depression and a protective tariff could not breathe the same air, and the other was the hallucination that hard times could not exist in the presence of a large per capita circulation. Last October witnessed a frightful financial, commercial and industrial depression, though all then enjoyed the twin blessings of high tariff and plenty of money.

A business panic is the child of liquidation. Periodically pay day comes in the business world, and then it is the solvent and the bankrupt are separated. Prosperity comes from diligence and thrift. Increased circulation results from prosperity. Speculation succeeds, to be followed by extravagance, luxury, and debauchery. Then business demands a settlement. That condition is what makes panics.

THE SHACKLES.

Collier's Weekly comes to the rescue of the down-trodden male creature, and declares that we must arise and assert our rights. We must proclaim ourselves free of the trammels of black and white, so long the prescribed and mournful garb of evening festivity. We must blossom forth in purple swallowtails. If not purple, then pink. Would that it might be set life is drab enough without dressing it for a Quaker part. Not that we ourselves yearn to emulate the lily of the field. But, toiling and reaping as we must, we look with high hope to the time when, conning our morning's paper, in "the season," we shall miss the artistic details of some somebody's imported loose an. Miss Otherbody's super-imposed diamonds, an in lieu thereof shall glad our eyes with something in this tenor: "The Hon. Heigh Muyque alone resplendent in a truly national costume, his coat being a spongie of silver stars upon a background of blue, while the emblematic design was carried out in brilliant but distasteful stripes of scarlet and white, running northward." Or a description, in effect, as follows: "A Parrow Keete led the cotillion in a creation which is destined to set a new fashion, the tails of the coat being cut very long and chastely designed, the one in mauve, the other in old gold, with a waistcoat of cerise polka-dots on a background of pale pink color. The bottom of his trousers legs were fringed with bells, giving a tone of extreme vivacity to this fetching costume." Give the old man a chance. His wife has monopolized it long enough.

A "SUCCESSFUL" INDIAN.

As we pale faces estimate success in life, some of the accomplishments of the red brother may not pass muster, but that is largely a matter of race. Indians no doubt estimate their fellows by what they have accomplished, and while we may not approve of most of the accomplishments, they make a great hit in the tepees. Take Chief Plenty Coos for illustration. This noble red man appeared before the senate committee on Indian affairs the other day and revealed some of his personal history, which has resulted in making him a great man among the Crow tribe.

In reply to questions, the chief explained that a "coo" was a stick on which Indians strung their trophies of war, otherwise scalps. In days gone by Chief Plenty Coos had no trouble in filling his stick during a tomahawk fest with neighboring tribes, and was often compelled to get several more. Hence his name. So great was his success along this line of assassination and scalp ripping that he commanded the admiration of his brothers. They made him a big chief and covered him with honors. Among the Indians he was as great a man as a state governor among us. But that isn't all that made Plenty Coos a "successful" Indian. He was quite a "squaws" man, having captured the hearts of no less than ten dusky maidens and married them, without regard to the customs of the white man. This gained for him renewed awe and respect from his tribesmen, and his position as a successful Indian was secure.

All of which is chiefly interesting as showing the difference between what consists of success in life. The highly civilized pale face abhors murder and bigamy. None of these things for him. But he goeth forth with designs on the bank roll of his brother, merely as a competitor in business, or some such matter, therefore legitimately. If, figuratively speaking, he throws down his competitors and takes their money away from them, he is successful, just as Chief Plenty Coos was among his people. Perhaps the world will yet develop a race that will look upon us as barbarians.

PLANS OF Y. M. C. A. ARE TALKED OVER

Meeting Held at Tucson in Interest of Association of the Southwest.

There was a meeting attended by about a score of gentlemen held at the rooms of the chamber of commerce in Tucson to discuss various plans for a Y. M. C. A. campaign over this section of the southwest. The meeting was held at the instigation of C. K. Ober, the senior field secretary of the Y. M. C. A. international committee, who has come out from New York for the purpose of aiding in the work directly in hand, and by D. W. Pollard of Douglas, who is in charge of the field work for Arizona, New Mexico, west Texas and Sonora.

There are already thirty-four grand divisions of the International Y. M. C. A. in this country and with the completion of the organization of this one, the thirty-fifth and last one will have been made up. The purpose of the meeting was not to take any steps at this time, looking to the organization of a local in Tucson, but to start the work and arrange ultimately for the appointment of two gentlemen from that city, who, with representatives from the other towns of the section, will constitute a general committee over the territory. Funds are to be raised for the work and the matter of their solicitation has been placed in charge of President Babcock of the University of Arizona. Messrs. Ober and Pollard stated that there are now but six locals in this section—Las Vegas, Douglas, El Paso, Bisbee, Phoenix and Deming. There are fifteen cities in the section

STORIES OF THE CANYON

By the Burro.

Out in Warren a happy bunch of Calumet &amp; Arizona engineers have rented a cottage, where they bunk in true bachelor style, taking their meals at a restaurant near by. The inhabitants of the new metropolis of Arizona have discovered some pleasing things about the boys. One of them is that the only reason they are not grand opera singers is because they have something better with the big mining company. Those boys can sing, all right, and don't you forget it. When they have a concert among themselves, the neighbors for a block or two around find some business in the immediate vicinity. The other night the saengerfest sang-ferested, and kept scores of people spellbound, although the performers did not know they were being listened to. The young were enthused, and the old taken back to youth, as the voices blended perfectly in good old songs, such as—

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight;
"Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight;
"Make me a child again, just for tonight!
"Mother, come back from the Echoless Shore,
"Take me again to your heart as of yore;
"Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care,
"Over my slumbers your loving watch keep—
"Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep!"
Then would come some good, red-blooded college song, succeeded by—"Way down on de Suwanee river, Far, far away,
Data where my heart am turning ebbin.
Data where do old folks stay?
Slowly the listeners dispersed at the end. "Where did Col. Powell get those boys?" commented one. "Let's send him a vote of thanks."

The only point of resemblance between Morris Marks, the Lowell merchant, and a Gila monster is that both would like to have warm weather in this latitude right away. "Don't you wish it would get warm?" asked the Burro of Mr. Marks. "Now you are talking sense, you long earned brute," was the reply. "Warm weather! Why when I see it coming over the hill from Hakersville, I am going to meet it with the South Bisbee band and a barbecue!"

THEIR ADVENTURES IN WALL STREET

It seems to me, says Billy Bull, that Hepburn is all wrong, Unless for Montreal a boom he wants to help along—
'Cause that's where we will go to trade, just to save the tax, If with favor on his arguments Congress ever acts.

So both agree that Hepburn, if he gets his tax bill through, Will give the trains and steamships lots and lots of things to do—
And with Wall street going to England they are both inclined to think, 'Stock Exchange might well be turned into a skating rink.
